Traditionally, jobs have been divided into two types, based on the clothing people wore to do their work: blue-collar jobs in factories and 1..... jobs in offices. These days, we usually refer to the two types as 2..... jobs and 3..... jobs respectively. Some jobs are 4..... : anyone can do these jobs, without being trained. Most jobs, however, are 5..... and many jobs are 6..... If you get a certificate, diploma or degree, then you will be 7..... Because many jobs are very specialised, you will receive 8..... to help you do the job. Although you will probably start as an assistant, you can hope to get a 9..... after a while. If you have to 10..... a long way to work, you may find it 11..... On the other hand, if you can take long holidays and your company provides you with a good 12..... plan, you may feel glad to have your job.
